

Selesees

by Ella Engel-Snow

I wasar

each moment of entry. A knock,
reticent step, to
full traction; skin and your bone pushes
deep in my soft
winter tissue.

Wasar so sweet
and sticky

that you would wander me

savor my
water

saunter
my wild grass.

Could I dare
seek love
without offering
my future, would you return? If you knew:

I am a mountain
not your woman.

Wasar

verb

1. to quiver with one's whole body as a result of sexual or sensual arousal from a thought, fantasy, or conversation.

Selesees

noun

1. a love specifically associated with sexual and/or sensual intimacy, which does not require (nor prevent) one to be "in love".
2. a commitment that is flexible, not governing.

verb

3. to love another person and their body without attaching ownership or projection.
